

Wadih Maalouf:

- PhD in Epidemiology and Biostatistics (Mental Health and Drug Addiction Epidemiology), Johns Hopkins School of Public Health.
- Held several tasks within UNODC related to reducing drug demand reduction programming. These included capacity building for national situation and resource assessment studies for orientation of drug control strategies as well as building national and regional capacities for evidence based responses.
- Was positioned as regional UNODC Drug Demand Reduction advisor for Middle East and North Africa up to between 2005 and 2010.
- As of 2010, resumed the post of Programme Office in the Drug Prevention and Health Branch, Prevention Treatment and Rehabilitation Section. Managing a global project on capacity building and piloting family skills and other prevention initiatives for the prevention of Drug Use, Crime and other risky behaviours in low and middle income countries.